

Salmon River alumni working on the district's building project share their thoughts about the value of education.

On a recent day when the temperature dipped to eleven below zero, construction workers penned a note to Salmon River students to stay in school. From left to right Shannon Cote, Calvin Lanpher, Russell Tarbell, Carl Mithell, Allen Arquette and Vaughn Arquette (not in photo) all shared the sentiment, STAY IN SCHOOL. Russell Tarbell wrote a note on a steel column to the students expressing his concern for their future well being. Russell has children who attended Salmon River and is now looking forward to his grandchildren's attendance. All of the workers expressed pride in the work they are doing for the next generation of students at Salmon River. Russell also reminded us that joining the union now requires a high school diploma!
